A company to rely upon

Heat of dry deserts, cold arctic winters or damp tropical air – our tail lifts will withstand any type of climate you expose them to.

When it comes to outstanding performances there are no short cuts. Our products have been developed for the uncompromising climate of northern Scandinavia, and by using superior components and materials we build tail lifts that won't let you down – no matter where you go.

The unbeatable reliability of our tail lifts has made us famous around the world. Zepro has the products you need in a quality that will serve you long term.

High quality

Our customers have known for a long time: Zepro means high quality. ISO 9001 is only the beginning of our extensive quality work, and we can also boast ISO 14001 Environmental Protection System Certification. Zepro is the only tail lift manufacturer to have both certificates.

To us, quality encompasses everything from materials and design to service and technical support. And we have come further than most in our striving for perfection. Our focus is to develop products that not only are free of problems, but also create new opportunities for our customers. We want to give more, an experience beyond the expected.

Surface treatment for durability.
 Our tail lifts are used in one of the most demanding of working environments. To further extend the lifetime of the lift, and to increase the trade-in value, we have developed a unique system for surface treatment. The following four-step process gives your lift an effective corrosion protection and an attractive aesthetic finish.

1. Degreasing
2. Steel shot blasting
3. Pretreating with our advanced Zinc Manganese Phosphate corrosion protection.
4. Coating with polyester powder, in the colour you have chosen.

The result?
 Our surface treatment is so effective, we can offer a full two-year warranty against rust. No other competitor can match it.

Global service

Who says that size doesn't matter? Being number one means acting like it too. Our organisation has the strength and the resources required to keeping your transports on the road where they belong. We are never further away than a phone-call, with answers to your questions and time saving specialised help. Wherever you are you can rely on our worldwide organisation of service centres for efficient service.

Zepro gives you the complete solution.

Fulfilling requirements
